ウ Mai's boyfriend has a sister.

問4 次の英文の内容に合っているものを、下のア～エの中から2つ選び、記号で答えよ。

Scientists in Argentina discovered bones of one of the world's largest dinosaurs. The *fossils belonged to a sauropod and they are around 90 million years old.

The bones are important because of their size. There are a lot of them, too. Experts also found a lot of teeth from *carnivorous animals. The experts will be able to learn what these animals ate. Much about their old *ecosystem can be learned, as well.

The *palaeontologists began to *excavate last year. A ranch employee noticed the fossils first.

*fossils 「化石」 *carnivorous 「肉食性の」 *ecosystem 「生態系」
*palaeontologist 「古生物学者、恐竜学者」 *excavate 「発掘する」

(<https://www.newsintlevels.com...>, Sep. 26, 2017)

- ア 世界最大級の恐竜の骨が、アルゼンチンで発見された。
- イ その化石は、約1億年以上前のものである。
- ウ 肉食動物の歯も発見され、何を食べていたかも解明されるだろう。
- エ 発見された化石から、古代の環境までは分からないだろう。

問5 次の英文を読んで、下の問いに答えよ。

Last year I spent a month in Thailand, and one thing, out of many, that *stuck out to me was how people did not turn down the volume of their phones while on the train.

In Tokyo, ★A [ア might be イ whose music ウ their headphones エ a passenger オ escaping from] will receive looks of *annoyance from those around them. Not in Thailand, though – the sounds of games, music videos and TV shows *emitting from cellphones competed against the noise coming from the TVs above the train doors. I *was relieved to return to Tokyo to the relative quietness we have on trains here.

However, while commuters in Japan generally keep the volume of their phones off, there is another issue with space. Many passengers seem to think that ★B [ア than the space イ or tablets have ウ that their fellow passengers get エ the space their smartphones オ is more important] .

I have seen smartphone users get angry and sometimes *aggressive toward other passengers for *squeezing into the space they were trying to keep for cellphones, *solely so that they can play their *gem-breaking dragon RPG, a few innings of baseball or a candy-smash puzzle game.

Some phone users who do not *resort to an emotional *outburst of some kind will instead hold their phones in a fellow commuter's face or hold it so it stays uncomfortably *jammed in a passenger's back.

As the trains are already uncomfortably packed with people, there's no need to make it more so by trying to make space for your device.

*stuck out 「目立った」

*annoyance 「いらだち」

*emitting 「発する」

*was relieved 「ほっとした」 し込む」

*aggressive 「攻撃的な」

*squeezing into 「無理に押

*solely 「単に」

*gem 「宝石」

*resort to 「～に訴える」

*outburst 「爆発」

*jammed 「引っかかった」
